I. DESCRIPTION

The countries of Latin America and the Caribbean are experiencing a crucial stage. In recent years the world economy was slowing down, which added to the health, humanitarian, social and economic crisis as a result of COVID-19, "has revealed the fragility of the globalized system and the underlying development model" (ECLAC , 2020a, page 14). We are currently facing challenges in health, due to the shortage of labor and adequate infrastructure; in education, due to the significant effects that teaching will have, especially in the most vulnerable sectors in terms of learning and food security; in employment and poverty, due to the drop in employment in the most disadvantaged sectors, but also due to the proliferation of informal work; as well as important challenges of protection and social cohesion are evaluated. Under this context and in the face of a panorama marked by urgency, response mechanisms have been developed from various sectors, creatively seeking new business models and impact, the emergence of multiple socio-environmental ventures and also the articulation of a collaborative ecosystem that seeks sustainable development. This course aims to understand, study and analyze how under this urgent context in Latin America and the Caribbean, new economies, companies and enterprises have emerged in collaboration that seek to co-build sustainable futures for the region.

II. OBJECTIVES

At the end of this workshop, the participant will:

1. Understand under what context new economic paradigms are emerging from the Latin American reality.
2. Discuss major advances in artificial intelligence and people analytics across countries.
3. Learn about the trends in Latin American socio-environmental entrepreneurship and the new business models that are emerging in the region.
4. Learn the vision of different Latin American companies that are focusing their efforts on impact investing.
5. Understand the phenomenon of intrapreneurship as a way to innovate within organizations.

III. EVALUATION

Personal assignment related to one of the topics: 100%

IV. METHODOLOGY

A combination of case discussions about firms operating in Latin America, lectures by different professors and guest executives, will be the main methodologies of this course.
